

Anne Arundel - 776
Carter's U.M. Church
Friendship Rd.
Friendship, MD 20758

1846, 1910

The present Carter's U.M. Church stands 62' from the east side of Friendship Rd., 1/8 mile from the village of Friendship. This structure was built in 1910 and is not the original structure. This church became the property of a black congregation in 1872. The cemetery, that surrounds the church on three sides, gives evidence that blacks and whites worshipped on this ground early in the 19th century. There are Esteps, Langfords and other notable southern Anne Arundel County white families buried here along with a freedman named Orange Jones buried before the Civil War.

DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (IF KNOWN) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

The present Carter's UM Church stands 62' from the east side of Friendship, 1/8th mile from the village proper. This structure was built in 1910 and is not the original structure. I am unable to say how many Churches have stood on this property. Some local historians say two, but most think ~~three~~. There are exposed brick piers on the north side of the church where the structure that was replaced by the present church stood. I have enclosed photographs of the existing church.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

Carter's United Methodist Church once belonged to a white congregation. It was given to the blacks in 1872. The cemetery that surrounds the Church on three sides gives evidence that blacks and whites worshipped on this ground early in the 19th century. There are Esteps, Langfords and other notable southern Anne Arundel County white families buried here along with a freeman named Orange Jones buried before the Civil War.

Friendship has long been the seat of southern Anne Arundel County Methodism. Legend says it got its name because of aid offered by some residents to a Methodist circuit rider in the 18th century after he had been waylaid by brigands. In any event, this is a significant site for black Methodists in Anne Arundel County.
